ERHS Wind Ensemble Plays Midwest Clinic in Chicago

by Matthew Arbach

"They said we broke the mold!" said Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) band director, Rachel Zephir. This was the response the ERHS wind ensemble received at the annual Midwest Clinic in Chicago from December 17 to 20. What made ERHS distinct was its presentation of mixed-instrument chamber music as opposed to the more traditional large band performance. Said Zephir, "We had numerous groups within our full ensemble. So many people said it was refreshing to see such an innovative program."

The Midwest Clinic began on December 7, 1946. It is the world's largest instrumental music education conference, bringing in participation from the entire country and around 40 countries. It is focused on improving and elucidating all aspects of music education to its members who include professionals involved in every level of this field. ERHS is the third high school from Maryland to perform in the event's history.

On December 12, the ensemble did a preview concert at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore.

The ERHS Wind Ensemble consists of 45 students. This is Zephir's fifth year at ERHS. They were joined on this trip by guest conductors, Harlan Parker from the Peabody Conservatory, and Michael Votta from the University of Maryland (UMD). In addition, Michelle Fowlin, choral director at ERHS, performed with the ensemble which received a tearful response from many in the audience.

The group presented nine chamber pieces of varying instrumentations, including a brass, saxophone and percussion ensemble, a woodwind octet and mixtures of brass and woodwinds. The composers of the works they performed included Beethoven, Dvorak, Thomas Tallis and various modern composers. They performed a world premiere arrangement of Tchaikovsky's Waltz of the Flowers by Dr. Anthony Rivera.

Aliki Arbach, music teacher at Laurel Elementary and a parent of French horn player and senior Olivia Arbach, served as a chaperone. She felt that the exposed and rigorous demands of the chamber music experience caused each participant to grow musically on every level, forcing them to become leaders and gain new levels of confidence and maturity. She stressed that several pieces were not conducted and that the

No I-495 Widening for Now: Hogan Will Focus on I-270

by Amy Hansen

Maryland Governor Larry Hogan and Comptroller Peter Franchot announced on January 3 that they would not work at expanding the Beltway (I-495) for now, but would focus on I-270. The deal comes before the January 8 scheduled meeting of the Maryland Board of Public Works, which still needs to approve the plan. Hogan and Franchot take up two of the three seats on the board. State Treasurer Nancy Kopp has the third.

Hogan's original Traffic Relief

Plan called for widening 495 as well as 270, in order to relieve traffic congestion. That proposal would have taken land adjacent to the highway, which includes homes in Greenbelt as well as other parts of Prince George's and Montgomery Counties.

Franchot, a Democrat and resident of Montgomery County, fought that plan. He said that he was pleased with the outcome of the discussions. "As a result of our agreement, no private

Green Ridge House: A Resource For Enhanced Senior Living

by Butch Hicks

Green Ridge House resident Louise Swiderski and her daughter Marcie Downs

Greenbelt's Green Ridge House opened May 27, 1979. The house has approximately 103 residents within its 101 one-bedroom apartments. Its four-story locale at 22 Ridge Road is on wooded grounds in an urban setting. The City of Greenbelt owns the residence facility that the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) designated as apartments for seniors at least 62 years old.

Christal Batey, Greenbelt community resource advocate and coordinator of Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL) coordinator, said Green Ridge House is part of the city's efforts to enhance the lives of seniors and allow them to remain in familiar surroundings. "It is providing an opportunity for residents to age in place," Batey said. "It's not only aging in place, it's aging in the right place. Green Ridge House organization and resources support seniors' needs through varied social activities, health presentations, exercise classes and educational workshops."

Joyce Marrel-Kolenky, Green Ridge House service coordinator, plans and coordinates those programs and activities. Her support ranges from scheduling health examinations, psychological and social needs evaluations to educating residents on bureaucratic procedures addressing client rights and being an advocate for residents.

Green Ridge House has appealing amenities such as a well-stocked library with enviable décor, ceramics room, community center, beauty shop, dining area, laundry room, a newly renovated living room and exercise facility.

The residents' comments attest to Green Ridge's extraordinary appeal. Louise Swiderski, 98, moved into Green Ridge when it opened in 1979. She has seen building updates including installation of elevators and laundry rooms and improvements in programs for residents. Swid-

Climate Crisis Rallies

On Friday, December 27, I attended my fourth Fire Drill Fridays on the Southeast lawn of the United States Capitol. According to www.firedrillfridays.com, Jane Fonda was “inspired by Greta and the youth climate strikes as well as Reverend Barber’s Moral Mondays and Randall Robinson’s often daily anti-apartheid protests,” Jane Fonda moved to Washington, D.C. in October “to be closer to the epicenter of the fight for our climate.” Every Friday since October 11, Jane has been “leading weekly demonstrations on Capitol Hill to demand that action by our political leaders be taken to address the climate emergency we are in.”

I agree with Jane Fonda in that “we can’t afford to wait.”

“The climate crisis is not an isolated issue – it involves every part of our economy and society. Because of that, each Friday demonstration will have a different focus as it relates to climate. Scientists, movement leaders, experts, activists, Indigenous leaders, community members and youth will come together to share their stories and demand that action be taken before it’s too late.”

The last Fire Drill Fridays in DC is January 10. The Thursday evening before the demonstration, Jane is hosting a live streamed “teach-in” with a panel of experts. For more information go to www.firedrillfridays.com.

I want to encourage more Greenbelters to attend the last Fire Drill Friday. So far, I have met only one other person from Greenbelt at the demonstrations I have attended. It would be nice to have a group from Greenbelt; I have had the only Stop the MAGLEV sign there. This is a wonderful opportunity to spotlight our local issues which will absolutely affect climate change, proposed highway widening, the assault on the Beltsville farms by the proposed MAGLEV train, and Engraving & Printing industrial development. This past Friday, I was able to meet an array of people from across the United States and learn about their local issues. It was a honor to be arrested on the steps of the United States Capitol with Lily Tomlin (actress, comedian, writer, singer, producer, and activist), Rolf Skar (senior campaign strategist, Greenpeace), and 30 other activists.

While riding in the paddy

olina, who told me about a development near his community that would clear cut 8,000 acres of forest. Upon my release from jail, I crossed the street to find a table staffed by activists with drinks and snacks. Since I was one of the first to be released I decided to stay until everyone was released. Soon we were joined by Jane Fonda and her friends from Greenpeace. Jane stayed there on the side of the street until everyone was released. She gave everyone a big hug and her thanks. Lily Tomlin, one of the last released, ran out into the street and blocked a car to allow a fellow activist to cross the street after their release. Since I was released early, I missed my hug, but I did get a great opportunity to have a personal conversation with Jane Fonda and Lily Tomlin together! I gave a little history of Greenbelt and our beginnings in the original New Deal, our Greenbelt, our forest preserve, the Beltsville farms and the proposed industrial development there. And the fact that Greenbelt still has its original homes from the original New Deal.

Ms. Fonda is a big supporter of the Roosevelt New Deal and cites it often when speaking of the need for a Green New Deal. She encouraged me to keep fighting for Greenbelt, and to keep fighting against industrial development at the Beltsville farms. December 27 was a wonderful day, I met a lot of interesting people, learned a lot, and got a lot of encouragement. It was well worth the $50 to get out of jail.

Please join me on Friday, January 10. I will be leaving the Greenbelt Metro Station at 10 a.m. Let’s all keep fighting for Greenbelt, our planet, and our future.

In Memoriam

Edith Barber

by Rick Ransom

Edith Barber in the Labor Day Festival Parade in 2005

Edith “Edie” Barber died at her apartment in Greenbelt under hospice care on December 30, 2019. She had taken a fall a few days earlier and cracked a bone in her neck. She was 95 years of age but more like age 65 in her level of activity.

Edith was born in Gladys, Va. (near Lynchburg), to Henry A. and Mary Elizabeth DePriest, who were both from farming families. Edith’s mother caught pneumonia and died when Edith was only two months old. Her father’s sister, Marcia (whom Edith called “Madee” because she couldn’t pronounce her name), purchased a piece of land with a house in Glenn Dale and moved in with them to help raise Edith. Edith would live the better part of her life there.

Edith met her late husband, Sgt. Bill Barber, Jr. from Philadelphia, not long after World War II began, while she was working for the Army Finance Office in Washington, D.C. Edith eventually began a career with the Rural Electrification Administration in Washington. She purchased a GHI unit on Ridge Road as the relative of a service member. She retired in 1981 with 30 years government service.

Bill Barker III and Eric “Ricky” Barber, Edith’s sons, were both Greenbelt boys growing up and many of the rest of us met Edith as their Mom. I knew Ricky from first grade at Center School (now the Community Center). I played for his wedding when he married Barbara Smith from Baltimore. Not having a daughter of her own, Edith treated Barbara as a daughter and would introduce her as such. After Ricky’s death, the two became even closer as Barbara and Carolyn, the daughter of Edith’s cousin Maie, who was literally Edith’s other “daughter,” coordinated activities and later transportation as Edith’s hearing and eyesight failed.

Ricky and Barbara later moved into the home in Glenn Dale and Edith returned to help care for Ricky after his initial stroke. She remained there until this past October when she took a small apartment in Greenbelt with her son Bill because they could no longer care for the house. It was during those nearly 30 years that she developed a close relationship with many local area musicians.

Edith purchased a covered platform that she used as a stage in the large backyard next to her pool. She had bands play there in the summers such as the Retro Deluxe Band, the Low Rent Quartet, Chick Hall and Patsy Stephens, Mary Shaver with Dave Sherman and the Smokin’ Polecats, Brendan Pelan, Lou Mello, as well as other individuals at less formal jam sessions. Our group, The Good Guys, played on many occasions. By then, I had married Barbara and had become a kind of son-in-law to Edith, as she liked to think of it.

She and her son Bill entertained often, having friends and many of us Old Greenbelt boys over for parties. She worked on her house and property right up until her final move last year. She loved to dance, and although more constrained in her final years, she was dancing at her favorite locale, The Old Bowie Town Grille, on the night before she fell.

She was a determined and independent woman who was, as Mary Shaver called her, “a force of nature.” She carried her small 5-foot frame with head held high and an easy smile, traits she tried to instill in her grandchildren and great-grandchildren, who all loved her dearly. She welcomed all without judgment or restraint but would not dwell on pity or bad events, saying, “Life keeps moving and you have to move with it.” We will remember her determination and grace now that she has moved on for the final time.

She is survived by her son, Bill of Glenn Dale and Greenbelt, as well as three granddaughters: Marcia Contreras (Eddie) of Hampton, N.H.; Melissa Robinson (Jermaine) of Alexandria, Va.; and Danielle Oluokun (Donny) of Anderson Island, Wash., near Tacoma. Her only sibling, Junior, died in a car accident when Edith was 16, and her second son, Eric, predeceased her in 1990 at age 42 from complications of diabetes.

In Memory of Jim Link

I was saddened by the news of the passing of Jim Link. He was my mentor, inspiration and faithful supporter for my self-published novels on Kindle. He was the force behind my years of writing poetry for poetry nights at the New Deal Café. He was there teaching writing courses for SAGE, where I enjoyed his dialogue about everything and nothing, and we so often exchanged a play on words or a pun. He always asked about the health and welfare of my dear fellow writer and next door neighbor, Ann King, who has since also died as have so many I loved in those days (including John Hayes among the many others who made me understand that you are never too old to get up on stage and say a few good words).

Slowly as years passed, I saw Jim Link less in a classroom and more often joining him in line at the Co-op Pharmacy. He was never without a smile and a hug. So now I must say good-bye, dear friend. When it is my turn, I will join you at the Writer’s Conference in the sky. And since poetry was so often our common thread, here are some lines for him to take with him as he joins our Lord.

I wink
When I think
Of Jim Link
Inspired by the muse
Is no excuse
Not to cry
As I say, Good-bye

Obituaries

James (Jim) Link

Greenbelt resident James R. (Jim) Link died on December 23, 2019. He was a beloved teacher, neighbor and poetry lover whose generous heart and wide-ranging intellect touched many people in our community.

Jim was born August 31, 1941, in Washington, D.C., to John C. Link and Melita Haardt Link. A graduate of the University of Notre Dame, he was a lifelong follower of Fighting Irish football, although he would admit they were overexposed and sometimes overrated. Jim served in the Army Reserves in the 1960s and was a frequent visitor to the American Legion in Greenbelt, where he shared his love of football and good conversation.

Jim’s long career as an English teacher began at Parkdale High School in Riverdale, where he taught for 10 years. He then went on to Prince George’s Community College, teaching English and other subjects from 1988 to 2007. He woke up every morning full of eager anticipation to meet his students and pass on his joyous passion for poetry and great literature. His ever-curious, unpretentious, non-judgmental personality inspired many of his students, some of whom stayed in touch with Jim well beyond their classroom years.

Jim relished reading, and his greatest delight was discussing books and poetry with people who shared his love of writers and writing. Even in his final weeks of life, he was ordering new books and stacking them within easy reach of his hospital bed. He hosted boisterous book clubs and poetry readings that went on for hours and were marked by laughter, pizza deliveries and empty wine bottles in his recycling bin the next day. From 2007 to 2019, Jim took his teaching skills and love of literature to the Greenbelt Community Center, Riderwood and other retirement communities to lead classes for the SAGE program (Seasoned Adults Growing Educationally).

He also enjoyed dissecting movies – from the classics to cult favorites – and held viewings at his home (again, fueled by pizza and beverages). For years, he wrote movie and theater reviews for the News Review. His reviews of local theater productions were always positive, gingerly pointing out flaws while cheering the efforts of the participants.

Jim’s was a familiar face around Greenbelt, and he seemed to know almost every resident. He gleefully took part in neighborhood gatherings, appearing as Charlie Brown, Superman and an aging hippie in Halloween festivities in recent years, and was especially happy when he went home with leftovers tucked under his arm. Those who knew him will remember Jim for his warmth, his generosity and his irrepressible spirit.

Jim is survived by his sister Melita Link of Gatineau, Quebec; nephew Mathieu Link-Arseneau; nieces Catherine Link-Arseneau and Patricia Jo Link; and a host of family and friends. He was predeceased by his parents and his brother, Joseph Link.

Funeral services will be held on Thursday, January 16, at 10 a.m. at St. Hugh’s Catholic Church. Following the funeral, a reception will be held at the American Legion Greenbelt Post 136.

Jim’s family advises guests that they don’t have to wear black, celebrating that Jim was a joyous person, full of light.

In lieu of flowers, those who wish to do so may consider a donation to a favorite cause.

small Maine towns, so I enjoy “shopping small” and appreciate the Co-op staff’s friendliness and willingness to meet special requests. Shopping there is like being “back home” again . . . except for the amazing beer and wine selections!

A big part of the problem is non-grocery stores’ getting into food sales. Once, we used to go to groceries for edibles and to other kinds of stores for everything else. Now, we buy food “on the fly” at Target, the dollar store, drugstore – even get fried chicken at the gas station! We enjoy shopping at farmers’ markets and ordering food online for home delivery.

So I’ll bet even Giant and Safeway are struggling to stay profitable, given the exploding competition for food dollars and grocery stores’ historically small profit margins. Now, in addition to MOM’s, Whole Foods and Wegmans, we have Germany-based Aldi and Lidl stores popping up all over – four within just a few miles of the Co-op.

Given the fierce competition for customers, maybe the best – or only? – way we can ensure the Co-op’s survival is to simply commit to supporting our home-grown, communally owned store. It sits in the heart of our historic “downtown,” helps draw customers to small businesses nearby, and shares its profits with Co-op members in good years. These are some very good reasons to continue to provide the customer loyalty the Co-op deserves.

FRA Should Cancel Maglev Project

The Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) has paused its environmental assessment of the Maglev train project. According to the Baltimore Sun (December 17, 2019) the purpose of the pause is to give Northeast Maglev time to provide more information on the design and engineering of the train, stations and alignments. According to Wayne Rogers, chairman and CEO of the Northeast Maglev, the information is needed for the entire project not just one section.

The final Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) is now delayed by nearly a year. The target date is now August 3, 2020. The completion of a draft EIS, which was expected in October, hasn’t been rescheduled. A separate ongoing review of how the project could affect historic properties along the proposed route has been extended to February.

It is quite possible the FRA has doubts about the need for the project and concerns about the impact it will have on the proposed route. Their concerns may include some expressed in the hundreds of letters we have sent to project and elected officials from local residents: (1) Maryland taxpayers will end up subsidizing the project’s operation and maintenance; (2) MARC and Amtrak are better options to reduce automobile traffic since they are mass transit systems, whereas the project would merely serve the elite inter-regional traveler; (3) the new infrastructure would greatly reduce our quality of life and lower property values; and, (4) the project would jeopardize our natural environment, which must be protected for future generations. According to the 2018 World Wildlife Fund Living Planet Report, transportation is one of the common causes of habitat loss and degradation of natural areas. The report identifies infrastructure projects as one of the most common pressures causing deforestation and forest degradation.

We oppose the project. At an estimated price of $10 to $12 billion it represents an enormous waste. We plan to continue our letter writing campaign until the FRA finally decides to cancel the project.

properties will be acquired by the state of Maryland for this project without final approval of the P3 agreement by the Board of Public Works.”

The new plan includes building toll lanes on 270 but allowing existing lanes to remain without tolls. Franchot said that Montgomery and Prince George’s Counties would receive “direct transit subsidies from the project’s toll receipts, the details of which will be specified in a Memorandum of Understanding between the state and the two counties.”

On January 3, Hogan said the agreement “marks a monumental achievement for our region.” He continued: “This means that we can finally move forward on our historic interstate agreement with Virginia to build a new American Legion Bridge and to solve what has been the number one problem in the Washington Capital Region for decades.”

Local Authors Discuss Planned Communities in Museum Lecture

by Megan Searing-Young

On Thursday, January 16, at 7:30 p.m. in Room 201 of the Community Center, Mary Corbin Sies and Isabelle Gournay will be giving a lecture and doing book signings for the new book, Iconic Planned Communities and the Challenge of Change. Sies and Gournay, along with Robert Firestone, edited the book. They also authored one of the chapters, Greenbelt: Sustaining the New Deal Legacy. Gournay wrote a chapter entitled Iconicity in Planned Communities: The Power of Visual Representation.

In the history of planning, the design of an entire community prior to its construction is among the oldest traditions. Iconic Planned Communities and the Challenge of Change explores the 21st-century fortunes of planned communities around the world. Drawing on interdisciplinary perspectives, the editors and contributors examine what happened to planned communities after their glory days had passed and they became vulnerable to pressures of growth, change and even decline. The 19 planned communities included in the book span the globe from New Lanark in Scotland, to Den-En Chofu in Japan to Soweto in South Africa.

Sies and Gournay were es-

Iconic Communities book cover

pecially interested in “how well these planned communities function for their residents today, after all sorts of changes – physical, social and political.” They hope “that our book will stimulate conversations about what is and isn’t working in these iconic planned communities and cross-fertilize strategies and ideas for making them more resilient.”

Sies and Gournay have been writing together since 2002 when they started their survey of Modern Movement resources in the State of Maryland. Gournay is a professor emerita at the University of Maryland where she taught history courses in the School of Architecture. Sies is a professor in the American Studies Department. Both are Greenbelt residents.

Sies and Gournay will sign books after the lecture. A limited number of books will be for sale at the event. If you’d like to purchase a book at the lecture, please reserve a copy by visiting the lecture page of the Greenbelt Museum website, greenbeltmuseum.org.

Democratic Club to Honor Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

by Konrad Herling

The Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club’s annual trip to Annapolis to pay tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. takes place Monday, January 20. The club, in concert with the offices of the state delegation (Senator Paul Pinsky and Delegates Anne Healey, Alonzo Washington and Nicole Williams), has arranged for a bus to take participants from the Greenbelt Library parking lot to Annapolis.

Those attending must arrive at the parking lot no later than 4:45 p.m. as the bus will leave promptly at 5 p.m. There is a nominal fee.

To reserve a seat on the bus, call the office of Delegate Washington at 301-858-3652 or email Alonzo.Washington@house.state.md.us no later than Tuesday, January 14. Seats fill up fast.

The Annapolis event honors the memory, promises and accomplishments of Dr. King. It features an inspiring speaker who connects the challenges the civil rights leader faced more than half a century ago with those of today.

The District 22 legislative representatives will provide their thoughts regarding Dr. King and outline some of the big challenging issues of the 2020 legislative session. Three Brothers Restaurant will provide dinner.

The last part of the Annapolis trip is a visit to the House or Senate chambers to witness the legislature in session with a focus on remembering the impact of Dr. King.

Kimberly Potts, left, on-site manager of Green Ridge House, confers with Christal Batey, Greenbelt community resource advocate and coordinator of Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL).

erski lauded another attraction for residents as she modeled an on-site beauty salon-created classic hairstyle. Among her residency experiences are 15 years of teaching line dancing, golfing, years of coordinating bingo sessions, dinner cruises on the Potomac aboard the Odyssey, fresh produce delivered to her door, and pancake brunches.

Swiderski said Green Ridge is safe with no crime issues. The building uses 24-hour security cameras and key card entry. Its modern apartments, along with spacious quarters, have smoke detectors, fire suppression sprinklers and maintenance staff that respond to the rare plumbing, electrical or structural issues.

Marcie Downs, Swiderski's daughter, moved into Green Ridge House about two years ago. She had spent more than 30 years traveling from southern Maryland to visit her mom. During those visits she gained insight into residents' active lifestyles, and saw well-cared-for residents and property. She said moving into Green Ridge was an easy decision to make: "I like my new home and visiting Mom became a trip to the next floor instead of a long distance drive."

Community Realty Company, Inc. has a management agreement with the City of Greenbelt. The company's representative and on-site manager, Kimberly Potts, said although Green Ridge House is owned by the City of Greenbelt, approximately two-thirds of the revenue comes from the HUD Section 8 program. The city funds an activity budget, but no other city funds are expended on Green Ridge House. According to one real estate summary, Green Ridge House is one of the most highly regarded Section 8 apartment communities in Maryland.

Green Ridge House is a 40-year-old building and management plans for infrastructure support.

Unplanned utility and structural failures are avoided through scheduled inspections and resident and maintenance staff input. Such overview limited elevator downtime during recent upgrades because repairs were planned as opposed to waiting for unit failures. The building's roof is being evaluated for replacement.

Potts said maintaining Green Ridge House residence quality is assured through scheduled inspections by the City of Greenbelt, HUD and various Maryland health and safety departments. Operating guidelines ensure residents meet all government requirements and that maintenance of living quarters and the building meet high standards. She said another vital source of maintaining residential quality comes from the residents association, which provides input about activities, educational programs, health care concerns and building issues and upkeep. The annual resident satisfaction survey also provides suggestions for building maintenance and programs development.

Steve Tippet, a Green Ridge resident for more than four years, said he is proud of his home. He said the building's organization ensures an enjoyable and safe environment. Other benefits of living in the facility Tippet named were social programs, financial and health seminars, day trips, crab feasts and easy transportation. He said, "I enjoy not having to cut grass, shovel snow or do the other homeowner chores. Green Ridge House provides all that I need and I'm proud to be living here."

Open enrollment is not available at this time. When the next open enrollment period is available, Green Ridge will publish sign-up information in this newspaper, including the dates and times. For more information about Green Ridge House visit its webpage at greenbeltmd.gov/government/departments/greenbelt-cares/senior-services-programs/green-ridge-house or call 301-474-7595.

Joyce Marrel-Kolenky, the Green Ridge House Services Coordinator, and Green Ridge House on-site Manager Kimberly Potts discuss activities associated with Green Ridge House residents.

enthusiastic response came from an audience of very discerning professionals.

Parent Anne Gardner, of sophomore trumpeter Rebecca Gardner, said that the experience "was an amazing opportunity by having the students play in small ensembles, where they had to listen to each other more, improved their musicianship to the level where they could participate in a prestigious event like this."

Senior and oboist Matthew Miller said that the experience was "as much about bonding with the other members of the ensemble as much as it was about playing the music." He felt that the chamber music approach "feels so much more intimate." He said that this "was a wonderful experience that I will be able to pull from as I continue to play music."

Alumni class of 2019 trumpeter Ivanna Ajakpo joined the group as well. She is currently a music education student at UMD. She said that "being able to display what we've been working on for so long was super rewarding." She added that "seeing everyone come out to support us really helped me understand how important it is to believe in what you do, and how your confidence can inspire others to take risks with pride, no matter how unorthodox or far-fetched." She got a "nice glimpse into some of the professional development opportunities and resources that are available for teachers and students alike."

ERHS has three first-chair players in this year's Maryland All-State Orchestra: Olivia Arbach, Matthew Miller and bassoonist Alex Weidman. String bassist and senior Cora Jackson was also chosen for the orchestra. Bassoonist and senior, Ryan Guo, was chosen for All-State Band.

Witty Play, Quadrille, Makes East Coast Premiere at GAC

by Julie Rapp

The play, Quadrille, A Romantic Play, is a delightful, entertaining production now being performed at the Greenbelt Arts Center (GAC). Written by Melynda Kiring, originally as a short story and briefly a musical, the author transformed the script into the utterly charming, witty production it is today.

The East Coast premiere of Quadrille at GAC is being billed as a romantic fairy tale set in 1835 when society was governed by strict rules, decorum and class divisions. Stephen Foreman directs the talented cast, who carry us away into an imaginary world where the characters weave a tale of love, friendship, romance and some hilarious conniving.

The play opens with Pamela Northrup, who delivers a stand-out performance as Myrna, congratulating herself as a successful independent woman, being the only female baker in town and by far the best baker. As the story unfolds, we are introduced to the blind Viscount St. Galen (Sir Joshua), played by the wonderful and convincing Jim Adams, who longs for companionship and who begins to melt Myrna's clever, self-reliant veneer. We are soon introduced to Lilianne Valiere, a gentlewoman of nobility played by Michaela Haber who gives an utterly charming, nuanced performance. We see Lilianne transform from a somewhat timid, obedient daughter into a determined woman who is willing to bend the rules a bit to get what she wants. Rounding out the four lovebirds is Justin Diaz, who plays the impetuous and impulsive Nicholas and who gives a rousing performance, full of energy and wit.

The show is held together by Michael Iacone, who plays Mr. Henderson, Sir Joshua's assistant in all things. Mr. Henderson directs the cast members in changing scenery between scenes with a sharp clap to remind them to straighten a bench or move a chair just so. In a most formal manner he narrates each scene change and displays an air of importance and superiority with a comedic flair. Jeannette Connors and Tyler Dos Santos play the maid and footman. They magically transform the stage sets between scenes. Creating an old-world atmosphere are the set and costume design, from Lilianne's flouncy, vintage gowns of the day to flickering lighting that resembles candlelight.

Don't miss this charming production where love is portrayed with a twist in all its complexity, simplicity and hilarity. The show runs Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons through January 19 with an additional performance on Thursday, January 16. To purchase tickets, visit greenbeltartscenter.org or call 301-441-8770.
